PREFACE

A book that wins a prize wins readers. Awards given to books make people more ready to read those books, for the winning of a literary prize is a piece of news which helps lift that volume above the common level and catches the attention of a whole new public. Thus the selling power of a book is instantly increased when it becomes a prize winner. This distinction prolongs its sale and often stays by it into old age. Prizes help to sell "old" books as well as "new," and keep the books of yesterday still in demand today.

Literary prizes have become so numerous that some guide is needed to their winners and this volume, now in its third revision, is intended to put into easily available form the constantly sought records of the books and authors which have won distinction in this way. The established annual prizes of many countries are included, such as the Nobel, Goncourt, Pulitzer, Hawthornden, James Tait Black, Newbery, Caldecott, as well as many unique and unrepeatable prizes. The information in regard to Continental prizes is not as complete as might be desired, but it is the latest word that could be obtained under the stress of the times.

As literary prizes have developed in the United States, they fall into three general classifications—annual awards, with monetary or honorary recognition (or both); fellowships for literary work in progress; and prize contests, some of which are established on an annual or semi-annual basis. The list of publishers' prize contests is constantly expanding, as this method of finding new talent has proved successful. Recently some of the large motion picture companies have adopted prize novel competitions with large money awards as a means of obtaining new film story material.

Some drama awards are included in this volume, although it is not within its scope to be all-inclusive in this field. Journalism awards for the most part are omitted. Only the important short story competitions conducted in cooperation with book publishers have been covered.

LITERARY PRIZES

Every effort has been made to make the listings as inclusive as possible. However, because of necessary limitations of space, in some few cases winners of awards prior to 1939 are not included in this edition. In all such instances users of the volume are referred to the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners for the names of prize winners up to that date.

It is not possible to devise a wholly satisfactory way of listing the dates of the awards. The best plan seems to be to give the year in which the award was announced. Most annual awards are for the books of the previous calendar year, although some prizes are offered in recognition of a life's work. Unless otherwise noted it may be assumed that the date of the inauguration of the various awards is that of the first prize winner given.

No attempt has been made to ascertain whether or not the titles listed are now in print. They have been included with the name of the original publisher. In the case of awards made outside of the United States, the American publisher is given when known; otherwise, the original publisher's name appears.

The first two editions of this book, which appeared in 1935 and 1939, were edited by Miss Bessie Graham, of Philadelphia, compiler of the well-known reference book, The Bookman's Manual (Bowker). However, with this third edition, the task of revision has been assumed by the publisher's staff. To all those who have assisted on this volume, the editor is most grateful, but particularly to Ruth Ellen Bains, who has seen the book through to its completion. We will be glad to receive word of corrections and omissions, and of new prizes which may be established.

NOBEL PRIZE

Nobel Prize for Literature

Of all the literary prizes, the Nobel Prize for Literature is the highest in value and in honor bestowed. It is one of the five prizes founded by Alfred Bernhard Nobel (1833-1896), the other four awards being for Physics, Chemistry, Medicine and Peace. It consists of a medal in gold bearing an inscription suitable to the recipient, and a sum of money which originally amounted to $40,000. This sum has fluctuated over the years. In 1946 it amounted to $33,700. In 1946 the Swedish Parliament voted to exempt the Nobel Foundation from all taxation. Therefore, effective in 1948, $10,000 will be added to each Nobel Prize.

The Nobel Prize for Literature is awarded by the Swedish Academy in Stockholm. The official announcement is made on the tenth of December, the anniversary of Nobel's death. Because of the war, no awards were made between 1939 and 1944.

Alfred Nobel was a Swede who amassed a fortune of seventy million dollars from the manufacture of dynamite, an invention which he had made and patented in Europe, England and America. He began his career by manufacturing nitroglycerine in a factory in Sweden. An explosion caused the death of his brother, Oscar, and the crippling of his father. From this disaster came Nobel's determination to find a less dangerous substance and his efforts resulted in his discovery of dynamite. He maintained a factory in Sweden, another in California, and the largest dynamite factory in the world at Aberdeen, Scotland.

By the terms of Nobel's will the prize for literature is to be given to "the person who shall have produced in the field of literature the most distinguished work of an idealistic tendency."

Although the prize would seem, from a reading of Nobel's will, to have been intended for the encouragement of the struggling author and as an incentive to future work rather than a reward for past work, the Academy has rarely so awarded it. The Nobel Prize is not awarded to any particular book, but rather to an author for the sum total of his works. No one may apply for the Nobel Prize; it is not for competition.

Three times an American has won the Nobel Prize for Literature and in medicine, physics and peace, the honor has come to America repeatedly. During the war years there were no less than twenty-eight Nobel Prize winner living in the United States, including such distinguished literary figures as Sigrid Undset, Thomas Mann and Maurice Maeterlinck.

AMERICAN PRIZES

GENERAL PRIZES

American Academy of Arts and Letters

National Institute of Arts and Letters

The National Institute of Arts and Letters, at 633 West 155th Street, New York 32, was organized at a meeting of the American Social Science Association in 1898. Membership was at first restricted to one hundred and fifty, but was later increased to two hundred and fifty. Eligibility for membership is conditioned upon distinguished attainment in literature or the fine arts. The American Academy of Arts and Letters was organized in 1904. Its membership is limited to fifty. The American Academy is a smaller group within the National Institute of Arts and Letters. In order to become eligible to the American Academy one must first be a member of the National Institute. In addition to the literary awards listed below, the American Academy and the National Institute award prizes in other branches of the arts.

AWARD OF MERIT MEDAL

The American Academy Award of Merit is a $1,000 prize accompanied by a medal. It is presented to an outstanding person in America representing one of the following arts: painting, sculpture, novel, poetry, drama. This award, established in 1942, is made in one of these fields each year, in the order given above, but is never made to any member of the Academy or of the National Institute.

- 1942 Charles Burchfield (painting.)
- 1943 Carl Wilhelm Milles (sculpture.)
- 1944 Theodore Dreiser (novel.)
- 1945 Wystan Hugh Auden (poetry.)
- 1946 John van Druten (drama.)

AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ARTS AND LETTERS GOLD MEDAL

The Gold Medal of the American Academy is conferred in recognition of special distinction in literature, art or music. It is given for the entire work of the recipient who must be a native or naturalized citizen of the United States. The Medal, which was designed by James Earle Fraser, is always given to non-members.

The winners of the medal from 1915 to 1930 may be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners. No Medal was awarded between 1930 and 1942.

- 1942 Ernest Bloch (Music.)

LITERARY PRIZES

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS MEDAL

The Howells Medal of the American Academy is, as stated by the donor, "to commemorate the name of our great American novelist." It is awarded every fifth year in recognition of the most distinguished work of American fiction published during that period. The funds necessary to provide this gold medal, designed by Anna Hyatt Huntington, were accepted by the Academy in 1921 on the eighty-fourth anniversary of the birth of William Dean Howells. The first award was made in 1925.

- 1925 Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, for her entire work.
- 1930 Willa Cather, for Death Comes for the Archbishop. (Knopf.)
- 1935 Pearl Buck, for The Good Earth. (John Day.)
- 1940 Ellen Glasgow, for her entire work.
- 1945 Booth Tarkington, for fiction.

AWARD FOR DISTINGUISHED ACHIEVEMENT

In 1945 the National Institute created the Award for Distinguished Achievement, providing a prize of $1,000. It is to be given to an eminent foreign artist, composer or writer living in America.

- 1945 Richard Beer-Hofmann, Austrian.
- 1946 Ralph Hodgson, English.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE FELLOWSHIPS

In 1945 two fellowships were established in memory of Edwin Arlington Robinson and Edward MacDowell. The first awards under this endowment were made in 1946.

- 1946 Edwin Arlington Robinson Fellowship—Edward Trask, writer.
- Edward MacDowell Fellowship—Hans Sahl, writer, and Robert E. Strassburg, composer. (Divided award.)

NATIONAL INSTITUTE GOLD MEDAL

The Gold Medal of the Institute is awarded annually to any citizen of the United States for distinguished services to arts or letters in the creation of original work. Awards have been made for sculpture, history, poetry, architecture, drama, painting, fiction, essays, biography, and music. Recipients of the Gold Medal for the years before 1935 may be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners.

- 1935 Agnes Repplier (essays and belles-lettres.)
- 1936 George Gray Barnard (sculpture.)
- 1937 Charles McLean Andrews (history and biography.)

AMERICAN PRIZES

- 1938 Walter Damrosch (music.)
- 1939 Robert Frost (poetry.)
- 1940 William Adams Delano (architecture.)
- 1941 Robert E. Sherwood (drama.)
- 1942 Cecilia Beaux (painting.)
- 1943 Stephen Vincent Benét (literature.)
- 1944 Willa Cather (fiction.)
- 1945 Paul Manship (sculpture.)
- 1946 Van Wyck Brooks (essays and criticism.)

AMERICAN ACADEMY AND NATIONAL INSTITUTE GRANTS

In 1940 the American Academy and the National Institute of Arts and Letters established Grants to be awarded to non-members. The Grants were $500 when first given in 1941; in 1942 they were increased to $1,000. The awards are "to aid in furthering creative work by American artists and to honor them for past achievement with a practical recognition." The recipients for literature have been:

RUSSELL LOINES MEMORIAL FUND

In 1924 the friends of Russell Loines, desiring to perpetuate his memory, established, and asked the National Institute of Arts and Letters to administer, a fund to be known as the Russell Loines Memorial Fund, the income from which is to be given periodically to some American or English poet not as a prize, but as a recognition of value. The sum was approximately $9,000, and the council, believing that awards of $1,000 should be made, wait until the accumulated income reaches that sum.

LITERARY PRIZES

- 1931 Collected Poems of Robert Frost, by Robert Frost. (Holt.)
1933 The Boar and the Shibboleth, by Edward Doro. (Knopf.)
1939 Letter to a Comrade, by Joy Davidman. (Yale.)
1942 Poems: 1930-1940, by Horace Gregory. (Harcourt.)

The A. B. A. National Book Awards

During the seven years from 1936 through 1942 the American Booksellers Association, 35 East 20th St., New York 3, gave National Book Awards at the time of their annual convention. The award took the form of an engraved bronze paperweight. The selections were made by a vote of booksellers throughout the country from a list compiled by a special committee of the A. B. A. There were five possible awards—the most distinguished novel of the year; the most distinguished non-fiction of the year; the most distinguished biography of the year; the most original book of the year; the forgotten book of the year—but awards were not always made for each category. During the war years when no A. B. A. conventions were held, the awards were discontinued and have not been resumed.

- 1936 Time Out of Mind, by Rachel Field. (Macmillan.) Fiction.
North to the Orient, by Anne Lindbergh. (Harcourt.) Non-fiction.
Personal History, by Vincent Sheean. (Doubleday.) Biography.
Circus of Dr. Lao, by Charles G. Finney. (Viking.) Original book.
- 1937 Gone with the Wind, by Margaret Mitchell. (Macmillan.) Fiction.
The Flowering of New England, by Van Wyck Brooks. (Dutton.) Non-fiction.
An American Doctor's Odyssey, by Victor Heiser. (Norton.) Biography.
The Country Kitchen, by Delia T. Lutes. (Little.) Original book.
I Met a Gypsy, by Nora Loftis. (Knopf.) Forgotten book.
- 1938 The Citadel, by A. J. Cronin. (Little.) Fiction.
Madame Curie, by Eve Curie. (Doubleday.) Non-fiction and Biography.
400,000,000 Customers, by Carl Crow. (Harper.) Original book.
On Borrowed Time, by Lawrence Watkins. (Knopf.) Forgotten book.

AMERICAN PRIZES

As I Remember Him, by Hans Zinsser. (Little.) Non-fiction.
Who Walk Alone, by Perry Burgess. (Holt.) Booksellers' discovery.
- 1942 Hold Autumn in Your Hand, by George Sessions Perry. (Viking.) Booksellers' discovery.

The American Historical Association Prizes

The American Historical Association awards are designed particularly to encourage those who have not published previously any considerable work nor established a wide reputation. All works submitted in competition for these prizes must be in the hands of the prize committee on or before the first of June in the year in which the award is made. The date of publication of printed monographs submitted in competition must fall within a period of two and one-half years prior to June first of the year of the award. Further information concerning the prizes may be obtained from the American Historical Association, Library of Congress Annex, Washington 25, D. C.

MEMORIAL FELLOWSHIP

A memorial fellowship of $1,000 has been established by the American Historical Association in honor of Albert J. Beveridge. It is to be awarded annually for the best original manuscript, either complete or in progress, on the history of the United States, Latin America, or Canada. The first award will be made in December of 1946.

This new fellowship represents an extension of the earlier program for the use of the Albert J. Beveridge fund.

Anisfield-Wolf Awards

The Saturday Review of Literature announced in 1934 a prize established by Mrs. Edith Anisfield Wolf of Cleveland, Ohio, in memory of her father, to be called the John Anisfield Award. The award was originally $1,000, but was later increased to $2,000 to provide for a second prize in the field of creative literature.

LITERARY PRIZES

The name was changed to the Anisfield-Wolf Awards. The prizes are awarded annually for sound and significant books published in the United States or abroad on the subject of racial relations in the contemporary world. The prize is administered by a committee consisting of Henry Seidel Canby of the Saturday Review of Literature, Henry Pratt Fairchild of New York University, and Ralph Linton of Columbia University.

Bross Foundation Prize

The trustees of Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Illinois, offer a cash prize of $15,000 for the best book or manuscript, heretofore unpublished, on the connection, relation, and mutual bearing of the Humanities, the Social Sciences, the Biological Sciences, or any other branch of knowledge with and upon the Christian religion. The award was made in 1940 and is scheduled to be made again in 1950. The Bross Foundation was planned by William Bross in the years following the death of his infant son, Nattie, in 1856. Further information may be had by addressing the President of Lake Forest College.

- 1940 Christianity: An Inquiry Into Its Nature and Truth, by Harris Franklin Rall. (Scribner.)

AMERICAN PRIZES

The John Burroughs Medal

The bronze medal of the John Burroughs Association is awarded annually for "a foremost literary work in the field so eminently occupied during his lifetime by John Burroughs," who called himself a "literary naturalist." Books eligible for consideration should combine literary quality with accuracy of statement and should be based on originality of observations and conclusions. There is no restriction with regard to the place of publication but the book should be in English and should have been published within three years prior to the date of the award. This is not an open competition; the selection is made by the judges from books in print. Information concerning the award may be obtained from the John Burroughs Association, the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West at 79th Street, New York 24, N. Y.

John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Fellowships

In order to improve the quality of education, and the practice of arts and professions in the United States, to foster research, and to provide for the cause of better international understanding, the late United States Senator, Simon Guggenheim, and his wife established in 1925 the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation in memory of a son who died in 1922.

Four million dollars were devoted to the establishment of this foundation which provides fellowships for research in any field of knowledge and for creative work in any of the fine arts. The endowment of the Foundation now totals $28,000,000.

All the income is devoted to providing opportunities for men and women of high ability to further their work. The Foundation's assistance is given to scholars and artists in the form of fellowships. The funds granted each fellow are designed to be adequate to his needs for the period of the fellowship, depending upon the needs of the work at hand. Men and women, married or unmarried, without distinction of race, color or creed, are eligible on equal terms. The fellows are allowed to carry on their work anywhere in the world. Under one of the fellowship plans, grants are made to citizens and permanent residents of the United States; under another plan, grants are made to citizens of thirteen Latin American countries.

In 1944, in addition to the usual awards, the Foundation appropriated $200,000 for Post-Service Fellowships to be awarded to young scholars and artists who have served the war effort in the Armed Forces or other governmental services.

The Guggenheim Fellowships are awarded in the fields of art, music, history, science, creative writing, philosophy, etc. However, the list below includes only those in creative writing and biography. Fellowship winners in these fields for the years from 1928 through 1939 may be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners. In normal cases the stipend will not exceed $2,500 a year. Further details may be obtained from the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation, 551 Fifth Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

The Avery Hopwood and Jule Hopwood Prizes

Since 1931 prizes for student writing have been awarded at the University of Michigan. These awards were made possible by Avery Hopwood, the dramatist, an alumnus of the university, who provided that prizes be given each year "to students who perform the best creative work in the fields of dramatic writing, fiction, poetry and the essay." Major and minor awards are made in each field and have varied from $75 to $2,500. Only regularly enrolled students in the University of Michigan may enter the competition. The list below includes only those winners whose books have been published since 1939. A partial list of winners from 1933 through 1938 appears in the earlier edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners. For further information, write to the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Laetare Medal

The Laetare Medal has been awarded annually since 1883 by the Academic Council of the University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, Indiana, as a recognition of merit and an incentive to greater achievement. The faith of the winner is not mentioned in the terms of the award, but the prize has always been given to a distinguished member of the Catholic laity. The name of the recipient is announced on Laetare Sunday, the fourth Sunday in Lent.

The list below includes only those winners since 1937 who have received the award for literary work.

- 1941 William Thomas Walsh, journalist and author.
 1942 Helen Constance White, author and teacher.
 1943 Thomas Francis Woodlock, editor.
 1944 Anne O'Hare McCormick, journalist.
 1946 Dr. Carlton J. H. Hayes, historian, author and diplomat.

LITERARY PRIZES

Limited Editions Club Gold Medal

This medal is awarded periodically to "the American author of that book, published in the three years previous to the making of the award, which is considered most nearly to attain the stature of a classic."

The Mystery Writers of America, Inc., 220 East 42nd Street, New York, N. Y., present an annual "Edgar Allan Poe" award for the best first mystery novel. The "Edgars" are copies of a special edition of The Portable Poe bound in red leather and are awarded in honor of the father of the detective story, Edgar Allan Poe.

- 1945 Watchful at Night, by Julius Fast. (Rinehart.)

AMERICAN PRIZES

New York University Literature Prize

The Gold Medal Award of the Society for the Libraries of New York University is offered for American authors "revealing new and distinctive talent in the field of imaginative literature." The first award was made in 1940. In March, 1943, it was announced that the award would be discontinued for the duration of the war. However, plans are being considered for resuming the award. It is expected that an award will be made in 1947. Further information may be obtained from the Society for the Libraries of New York University, New York University, Washington Square, New York.

1941 Who Walk Alone, by Perry Burgess. (Holt.)
1942 The Trees, by Conrad Richter. (Knopf.)

Ohioana Awards

In recent years there has been much interest in regional writers and groups in various states and sectors have offered prizes for regional material. However, among the most widely known and firmly established of these are the Ohioana Awards and the California Medals.

The Martha Kinney Cooper Ohioana Library was founded to honor Ohio writers, to acquaint the public with their books, to collect these books in one place and thereby preserve the culture and traditions of the state. In 1941 the Executive Board inaugurated a plan providing awards to a number of outstanding books. The prizes, which take the form of ceramic medals designed by Paul Bogataya, are awarded annually in the fall.

The Ohioana Library is the only one of its kind that has been developed wholly by private subscription and is unique in its wide promotion for Ohio authors. Further information concerning the awards may be obtained from Mrs. Depew Head, Ohioana Library, 1109 State Office Building, Columbus 15, Ohio.

- 1942 Prelude to Victory, by James B. Reston. (Knopf.)

Humor: The Queen Was in the Kitchen, by Daphne Alloway McVicker. (Whittlesey House.)
I Never Left Home, by Bob Hope. (Simon & Schuster.)

Pulitzer Prizes in Letters

The Pulitzer Prizes in Letters date from 1917. They were established by the terms of the will of Joseph Pulitzer (1847-1911) Mr. Pulitzer is remembered as the newspaper genius of the New York World and for his gift of a School of Journalism to Columbia University, as well as for his prizes to American literature.

Usually five prizes of $500 each (prior to 1942 these prizes were $1,000 each) are awarded in the field of letters. However, in 1941 and 1946 no award was given for a novel; in 1946 no poetry prize was given; in 1942 and 1944 no drama prize could be decided upon, although in the latter year a special award of $500 was given to Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II for the operetta, Oklahoma. Since 1917 only two authors have refused the Pulitzer prizes: Sinclair Lewis in 1926 for Arrow-smith and William Saroyan in 1940 for his play, The Time of Your Life. A rather complete outline of the discussions centering around early Pulitzer prize winners will be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners.

In addition to prizes in letters, there are Pulitzer prizes in journalism, music, and traveling scholarships for graduates of the School of Journalism and students of the National Academy of Design. The terms of the awards, revised to May 1946, are as follows:

1. The award of prizes and traveling scholarships is made by the Trustees of Columbia University on the recommendation of the Advisory Board of the Graduate School of Journalism, and is usually announced during the month of May.

2. Nominations of candidates for any one of the Pulitzer Prizes should be made in writing on or before February 1 of each year, addressed to the Secretary of Columbia University, New York, on forms which may be obtained on application to the Secretary of the University.

3. Each nomination must be accompanied by three copies of any book, or one copy of any editorial, article, or other material submitted by any competitor, or on his behalf. Books submitted in competition for the Prizes become the property of the University. In the case of a musical composition, performing organizations (orchestras, theaters, etc.) are requested to send nominations accompanied by one copy of the score. The Advisory Board, at its discretion, may waive the requirement of submission of the score of a musical work if warranted by special circumstances, for example, if there is only one existing score, indispensable for performance. Nomination of a play, opera, or ballet, should be made while it is being performed.

4. Competition for a prize will be limited, except in the case of the drama and music, to work done during the calendar year ending December 31 next preceding; consideration for the prizes in music and drama will be of works produced during the twelve months April 1 to March 31 inclusive.

5. The Advisory Board shall be under no obligation to pass upon the merits of any book, musical score, manuscript, editorial, article, or other literary material unless the same shall have been submitted in accordance with Paragraphs 2 and 3, preceding, but may do so at the request of any of its members.

6. If in any one year no book, play, or musical composition written for a prize offered shall be of sufficient excellence in the opinion of the Advisory Board, or if in any other subject of competition all the competitors shall fall below the standard of excellence fixed by the Advisory Board, then in that case the amount of such prize or prizes may be withheld in such year.

7. Nothing in this plan relating to the preliminary selection or nomination of candidates for the several prizes and traveling scholarships shall be deemed to limit in any way the authority and control of the Advisory Board, who may, at their discretion, modify any of the provisions relating to the preliminary selection or nomination of candidates.

8. Any author, composer, or journalist is eligible for consideration each year for any award, irrespective of the fact that he may have received a prize in any previous year.

LITERARY PRIZES

Prizes in Letters are made annually as follows:

1. For a distinguished novel published during the year by an American author, preferably dealing with American life, $500.
2. For the original American play, performed in New York, which shall represent in marked fashion the educational value and power of the stage, preferably dealing with American life, $500.
3. For a distinguished book of the year upon the history of the United States, $500.
4. For a distinguished American biography teaching patriotic and unselfish services to the people, illustrated by an eminent example, excluding, as too obvious, the names of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, $500.
5. For a distinguished volume of verse published during the year by an American author, $500.

Writers' Conferences

Every year at the various summer writers' conferences, prizes are offered for manuscripts submitted by the attending students. The prizes are too numerous and too varied from year to year to be listed in a book of this scope. However, the importance of these conferences should not be overlooked. In the past few years the important conferences have been: Bread Loaf Writers' Conference, Middlebury, Vermont; University of New Hampshire Writers' Conference, Durham, New Hampshire; Midwestern Writers' Conference, Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois; Indiana University Writers' Conference; University of Wisconsin Writers' Conference; Olivet Writers' Conference, Michigan; University of Colorado Writers' Conference, Boulder, Colorado; Writers' Conference of the West, Oakland, California; Pacific Northwest Writers' Conference, University of Washington.

AMERICAN PRIZES

The seriousness and breadth of the work involved may be judged by the recognized merit of the teachers and lecturers employed at the conferences. The following is but a brief list of important figures in American literature who have participated: Robert Frost, Louis Untermeyer, James T. Farrell, Robert E. Sherwood, Paul Green, Robert P. Tristram Coffin, Louis Adamic, Carl Sandburg, Katherine Anne Porter, Sherwood Anderson.

The prizes offered each year range in value from $25 prizes for a sonnet to the $250 novel awards offered by the Thomas Y. Crowell Company and Farrar and Rinehart at the Midwestern Writers' Conference. The following publications and organizations have, in the past few years, sponsored awards of varying amounts at the Writers' Conferences: American Weave; Chicago Daily News; Chicago Sun; Coronet Magazine; Thomas Y. Crowell Company; Dodd, Mead and Company; Doubleday - Curtis Brown; Farrar and Rinehart; National Broadcasting Company; Quarrie Corporation; Rewrite; A. A. Wyn.

PUBLISHERS' PRIZES

Abingdon-Cokesbury Award

In 1944 the Abingdon-Cokesbury Press offered a prize of $500 for the best book by a new writer. There was no stipulation as to the character of the text except that it should be over 40,000 words and that the writer should have in mind the fact that Abingdon-Cokesbury publishes religious books.

BRUCE FELLOWSHIPS

The Bruce Publishing Company has established four annual author fellowships, one in biography and three in fiction. These fellowships are open to any Catholic lay person and are offered "in an effort to meet more adequately the need for good novels and biographies among a growing number of Catholic readers, and to encourage potential lay Catholic authors to write." Each fellowship pays the holder $1,200, payable in twelve monthly installments. Complete rules of the offer may be obtained from The Bruce Publishing Company, 540 North Michigan Street, Milwaukee 1, Wisconsin.

1946 The Flight of the Swan, by Margaret Ann Hubbard. Fiction.

Carey-Thomas Award

The Carey-Thomas Award was established in 1942 by The Publishers' Weekly, the American book trade journal, as a means of honoring publishing firms for carefully planned enterprises — not credit for editorial judgment alone, or production and promotion alone, but for all the elements that make for good publishing: the creative idea, cooperation with the author, careful production and imagination, and successful marketing. "The conception of just what constitutes good publishing can be studied only from examples," state the donors, "and if over the years competent judges point out where excellence lies, the accumulating record will help visualize what good publishing is and will encourage more enterprises of equal standard."

A jury composed of two critics, a bookseller, an author and a librarian is appointed annually by The Publishers' Weekly and its decision is announced in January to cover publication of the preceding year. The award, which takes the form of a printed

EUGENE SAXTON MEMORIAL FELLOWSHIPS

The Eugene F. Saxton Memorial Trust has been established by Harper and Brothers in memory of the late Eugene F. Saxton, for many years head editor of Harper. The purpose of the memorial trust, which was founded in 1944, is to offer fellowships with substantial grants of money to creative writers, especially new ones who lack publishing connections and financial means. Authors who receive these fellowships will be free to arrange for publication of their books with any publishing house they may choose. The fellowships have no fixed value, and may be contributed to from time to time. The entire administration of the funds and other matters concerning the fellowship are in the hands of a board of three trustees: Martha P. Saxton, widow of Eugene F. Saxton; Amy Loveman, associate editor of the Saturday Review of Literature and head of the editorial department of the Book-of-the-Month Club; and Edward C. Aswell, editor of general publications for Harper.

The general rule, except for unusual circumstances, is that the fellowship in each case will not exceed $2,500 in any one year, and this amount will be an outright grant and in no part returnable. All applications will be considered as soon as possible and may be filed at any time. These may be secured from the Eugene F. Saxton Memorial Trust, Harper and Brothers, 49 East 33rd Street, New York 16, N. Y.

1945 Richard Plant.

Houghton Mifflin Prizes

LIFE IN AMERICA AWARDS

Houghton Mifflin offers a prize of $2,500 for manuscripts to be published in a series of books called Life in America. "A prize-winning manuscript may be the life story of a man or woman of any profession, business or occupation. It may be written in the first person by the subject of the book, it may be the biography of someone of this or an earlier generation, or it may deal with some important aspect of America as expressed in the lives of its people. The only qualification is that it shall definitely contribute to the understanding of our country by presenting a true and vivid account of life in America."

Writers intending to submit manuscripts may send in an application blank signifying their intention. Further details may be obtained from the Life in America Editor, Houghton Mifflin Company, 2 Park Street, Boston 7, Massachusetts.

The John Day Foreign Service Prize

In honor of the twentieth anniversary of the American Foreign Service, John Day Co., Inc. announced in December 1944 a Foreign Service Book Contest. The competition was open only to members of the American Foreign Service—consuls, ministers and other civilian diplomatic personnel under the supervision of the State Department, or to the wife or husband of any of the foregoing. The award was $1,000, an outright prize of $500, the remainder to apply against book royalties. The contest, which closed on September 30, 1946, was open to fiction or non-fiction, on any subject of interest to the general reader. Other details may be obtained from the John Day Co., Inc., 40 East 49th Street, New York 17, N. Y.

The Alfred A. Knopf Literary Fellowships

To celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary in 1939, Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., offered three annual awards of $1,200 for the purpose of assisting talented writers in completing planned, unfinished books.

The sums received under each fellowship are advances against royalties to be earned by the book and are payable in monthly installments. In all cases, American topics or themes are preferred.

In 1946 the fellowship program was revised to provide for four awards in three fields of literary achievement: (1) American history or biography; (2) Physical or biological science; (3) Fiction. Two awards are available in the first category—one of $5,000 and one of $2,500. The awards for science and fiction are $2,500 each.

Further details may be obtained from Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., 501 Madison Ave., New York 22, N. Y.

AMERICAN PRIZES

Reynal and Hitchcock Prizes

REYNAL AND HITCHCOCK NON-FICTION PRIZE

In 1940 Reynal and Hitchcock offered a prize of $2,500 for a book-length manuscript by a member of an American college or university staff. The award was offered for a book written for the general reader, not a textbook or professional book—"a really original and distinguished piece of work covering a field of serious interest."

1941 The Destiny of Western Man, by W. T. Stace. (Reynal & Hitchcock.)

"YOUTH TODAY" CONTEST

The new children's book department of Reynal and Hitchcock, Inc., sponsored a $3,500 "Youth Today" contest in 1945. The competition accepted manuscripts from new or established authors dealing in a sensitive, realistic manner with "some aspect of contemporary American life and youth problems, either fiction, or non-fiction." The award was offered for "a story intimately related to our modern world, of interest to young readers, and vitalized by the author's genuine concern with an important problem of young people today." Reynal and Hitchcock, Inc., offered the prize to "stimulate the writing of books that add to the understanding, sympathy and wisdom with which young people look at the age in which we live."

1946 Willow Hill, by Phyllis Whitney.

Rinehart and Company Scholarships

In 1945 Farrar and Rinehart awarded two scholarships designed to enable young writers to devote full time to study and writing under skilled supervision. The scholarships, which provided an outright prize of $1,000 each, were given in honor of Du Bose Heyward and Stephen Vincent Benét. The scholarship program was taken over by Rinehart and Company in 1946.

1945 Narrow the Heart, by Margaret Anne Morgan.
The Changeling, by Roy Flynn.

Saturday Review of Literature Special Award

The editors of the Saturday Review of Literature have, from time to time, conferred a special Award for Distinguished Service to American Literature. The award consists of a plaque bearing an inscription and a hand-carved depiction of a rooster, the mast-head design of the Saturday Review of Literature. The award is made only when, in the opinion of the editors, someone or something really contributes to the development of the culture of America.

LITERARY PRIZES

- 1940 "Information Please", radio program.
- 1941 Ellen Glasgow, novelist.
- 1944 Yank, the Army Weekly.

Scribner Prize in American History

In commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the firm, Charles Scribner's Sons offered a prize of $10,000 for a manuscript of major importance in the field of American history. Of the $10,000 prize, $5,000 was an outright prize, and $5,000 an advance on account of royalties. The competition was held under the auspices of The Society of American Historians, which selected the judges. In considering the manuscripts, the judges looked for the obvious qualities of literary and historical merit, but also for its interest to the general reader. The purpose of the prize, in the words of the sponsor, was "to make history readable." The contest closed February 1, 1946 and the winner was announced on November 7, 1946.

- 1946 Ordeal of the Union, by Allan Nevins.

Simon and Schuster Fellowship Fund

In 1945 the editors of Simon and Schuster set aside a fund of $50,000 for the purpose of aiding young novelists. Any writer under thirty-eight is eligible, providing he has no previous commitment for novels to another publisher and providing he submits material of talent and promise to the editors. The sums paid to individuals vary and are dependent upon the circumstances under which the books are being written. There is no limit to the number of applicants in any one year, and no blanket formula is to be used in judging. The plan of assistance will be worked out on the basis of material and information supplied by the candidates. Simon and Schuster reserves the right to decide whether or not the completed book will be published.

AMERICAN PRIZES

The fund will be kept revolving with the aid of profits accruing to Simon and Schuster from the books published. The plan will be given a three years' trial, then reviewed; if it is found successful, it will be continued.

Westminster Annual Award For Fiction

In 1945 the Westminster Press announced an annual prize for fiction, with a $5,000 award for the best novel emphasizing the influence of Christian faith in contemporary life or history. No restriction is placed upon setting, situation, or characters; every manuscript submitted will be judged solely on the basis of literary merit. Because no award was made in 1946, the prize in 1947 will amount to $8,000. Full information is available upon request to the Westminster Annual Award, 952 Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia 7, Pennsylvania.

1946 No award.

Whittlesey House Fifteenth Anniversary Fellowship Awards

In celebration of their fifteenth anniversary, Whittlesey House, a division of the McGraw-Hill Book Company, and Science Illustrated established in 1945 a program of fellowship awards in science to encourage competent authors to write on scientific subjects for the layman. In addition to the first prize of $10,000, $1,000 was offered to the author of each project accepted for publication, in order to enable the author to complete his project and to do research otherwise impossible. Information concerning the competition, which closed November 1, 1946, may be obtained from Whittlesey House, 330 West 42nd Street, New York 18, N. Y.

JUVENILE PRIZES

The Caldecott Medal

The Caldecott Medal, first awarded in 1938, is presented annually by the same committee awarding the John Newbery Medal. The donor is Frederic G. Melcher, editor of Publishers' Weekly. The winning book must be first published in America, but the artist need not be an American citizen. This was the first award given in recognition of the illustrator of a book.

The award was named for Randolph Caldecott, the famous English illustrator, who died in St. Augustine in 1886. He, together with Kate Greenaway and Walter Crane, began a new era of picture books for children. On the face of the medal is a reproduction of Caldecott's original illustration of John Gilpin on his famous ride. The reverse side carries an illustration of "four and twenty blackbirds baked in a pie". Around the central engraving is the inscription, "For the most distinguished American Picture Book for Children", with space for the name of the recipient and the date. The sculptor was René Chambellan, who designed the Newbery Medal.

LITERARY PRIZES

The John Newbery Medal

The John Newbery Medal has been awarded annually since 1922 by the Children's Library Association of the Division of Libraries for Children and Young People of the American Library Association for the most distinguished contribution to literature for American children. Books by authors of foreign birth are eligible if the books are first published in America. Compilations are not eligible.

The announcement of this award, which is for a book of the previous year, is made at the Annual Conference of the American Library Association, usually held in June. The Committee which makes the award now consists of twenty-three members—the Chairman, the four officers of the Children's Library Association, the chairman of the previous year, the chairman and four members of the Book Evaluation Committee, the chairman of the other four standing committees, three members-at-large, and the chairman and four members of the School Library Section. The bronze medal is the gift of Frederic G. Melcher, editor of the Publishers' Weekly. The design for the medal was made by the American sculptor, René Chambellan.

This prize for the best juvenile is most appropriately named for John Newbery (1713-1767), a London bookseller, who first conceived the idea of publishing books expressly for children. Newbery's famous Juvenile Library was made up of tiny volumes, four inches tall, bound in "flowery and gilt" Dutch paper.

A more detailed description of Newbery's publishing activities may be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners.

POETRY PRIZES

Academy of American Poets Award

The Academy of American Poets, 435 East 52nd Street, New York, N. Y., sets forth its purpose as twofold: "first, to encourage and foster the work of American poets of proven gifts and merit; second, to discover new poetic genius wherever it may be in America." The Academy plans to offer an annual Fellowship of $5,000 to a deserving American poet who, for practical reasons, cannot otherwise devote himself entirely to the writing of poetry. Fellowships may be awarded to the same individual for successive years without limit.

In 1937, Edwin Markham was given a special award of $5,000 for great achievement in poetry. This was the first award since the Academy was chartered in 1934. The first formal Fellowship was awarded in 1946.

1946 Edgar Lee Masters.

Harriet Monroe Poetry Award

The Harriet Monroe Poetry Award of $500 was established under the will of Harriet Monroe, founder and for more than twenty years editor of Poetry, A Magazine of Verse, for the advancement and encouragement of poetry. It is administered by the University of Chicago and is to be awarded from time to time to an American poet of distinction and distinguished service. Preference is given to poets of progressive rather than academic tendencies.

1941 Muriel Rukeyser
1944 Marianne Moore

1945 Marianne Moore
1946 Wallace Stevens

League to Support Poetry

The League to Support Poetry, 327 West 18th Street, New York, N. Y., was founded in 1936 for the purpose of publishing distinguished volumes of poetry on a self-supporting basis which would allow royalties to be paid to their authors. All the books which the League has already published, with the endorsement of the member-groups and judges, were financed by advance subscription. The League publishes one volume of poetry, on a royalty basis, every October. The book of the year is chosen by a competition, open to all poets, which is held during January and February of each year. The winner is announced in May. The following volumes have been published:

LITERARY PRIZES

Poetry Magazine Awards

Poetry, A Magazine of Verse, published at 232 East Erie Street, Chicago, Illinois, sponsors eight awards annually. The prizes are given for work that has appeared in the magazine during the preceding year and are announced in the November issue of the magazine. In each case, the award winners listed below include only those since 1938. Previous winners may be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners. Many names, later to become prominent in the history of American poetry, first achieved recognition in Poetry. The long list of winners of the prizes listed below includes such famous American poets as Carl Sandburg, Vachel Lindsay, Robert Frost, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Elinor Wylie, Hart Crane, Edna St. Vincent Millay, Marianne Moore, Robert Penn Warren, William Carlos Williams, and W. H. Auden.

EDWARD BLAND MEMORIAL FELLOWSHIP PRIZE

This prize of $50, formerly known as the Fellowship Prize, was founded in 1943 through the generosity of the Chicago Poets' Class, a group of young Negro poets. It is given preferably for a work "which most profoundly contributes to or expresses understanding and contact between nations, races, classes, or creeds."

- 1943 Patrick Anderson.
- 1944 Oscar Williams.
- 1945 May Sarton.

OSCAR BLUMENTHAL PRIZE

This prize of $100, founded in 1936, is awarded annually by Charles M. Leviton in memory of Oscar Blumenthal.

Yale Series of Younger Poets

These contests were initiated in 1919 by Clarence Day, well-known author and brother of the founder of Yale University Press. From 1920 to 1924, two volumes were published during each of the two yearly contests, held in the spring and fall. From 1924 to 1932 two volumes were issued semi-annually. In 1933, when Stephen Vincent Benét became editor of the Yale Series of Younger Poets, it was decided to issue only one volume a year. In 1946 Wystan Hugh Auden became editor, succeeding Archibald MacLeish. The contest closes on March first of each year.

The competition, which is designed to provide a publishing medium for the first volumes of America's promising poets, is open to American citizens under thirty who have not previously published a volume of verse. There is a prize of $100 in addition to the usual author's royalties and publication of the volume by the Yale University Press. The award of $100 was suggested by Stephen Vincent Benét and is paid out of the editor's fee.

Rules of the contest may be obtained from the Yale Series of Younger Poets, Yale University Press, New Haven, Connecticut.

DRAMA PRIZES

Sidney Howard Memorial Award

In 1939 the five directors of the Playwrights' Company, Maxwell Anderson, S. N. Behrman, Elmer Rice, Robert E. Sherwood and John F. Wharton, established the Sidney Howard Memorial Award of $1,500. The prize, a memorial to Sidney Howard, who was a Playwrights' Company director, is given annually to a new American playwright who, with no previous noteworthy success in the theater, has shown talent through the production of one or more of his plays in New York. The award is not designed to honor the "best play of the season," but to give support to a promising playwright. In 1941 the Playwrights' Company, unable to agree upon a recipient for the award, donated the prize money to the Authors' League Fund of the Authors' League of America for financial assistance to needy young dramatists. In 1943 the directors deviated slightly from the rules and awarded the prize money to the New School for Social Research to enable that group to produce Winter Soldiers, by Dan James.

1940 Thunder Rock, by Robert Ardrey. (Dramatists.)

1941-1944 No awards. See above.

1945 The Glass Menagerie, by Tennessee Williams. (Random.)

1946 Born Yesterday, by Garson Kanin. (Viking.)

Home of the Brave, by Arthur Laurents. (Random.)

New York Drama Critics Circle Award

In 1935 the play reviewers of New York established an organization known as the New York Drama Critics Circle. The Circle awards a Medal each season to an American playwright for the best play, in the Circle opinion, produced in New York City. The prize is a silver plaque depicting a scene from the old John Street Theater. This award was established to offset the Pulitzer Drama Award with which the critics are rarely in agreement. In 1938 the Circle initiated an award for the best foreign play of the season. In both cases the Circle withholds the award if no play is deemed worthy of the distinction.

1936 Winterset, by Maxwell Anderson. (Dodd.)

1937 High Tor, by Maxwell Anderson. (Dodd.)

1938 Of Mice and Men, by John Steinbeck. (Covici.)

Shadow and Substance, by Paul Vincent Carroll. (Random.)

1939 No award for American play.

Charles H. Sergel Award

This award, established by Annie Meyers Sergel in memory of her husband, Charles H. Sergel, founder of the Dramatic Publishing Company of Chicago, is designed to encourage the writing of new American plays. The award is administered by the University of Chicago. The competition was originally conducted annually, with a prize of $500. In 1942-43, it was decided to give the award every two years, with a prize of $1,000. The contest is open to any citizen of the United States for a full-length original play. Further information may be obtained from the Charles H. Sergel Play Contest, University of Chicago.

- 1942 Ballad Requiem for Lincoln, by M. Greenwald.
- 1943 Home Is the Hunter, by Alice M. Dennis.
- 1945 Summer Fury, by James Broughton.

MAXWELL ANDERSON AWARD

The Maxwell Anderson Award of $100 for verse drama was established at Stanford University in 1936 in honor of the foremost dramatic poet of America, who was once a graduate student at the University. The aim of the contest is to encourage the production of good plays in verse on American themes. The contest is open to all persons interested in dramatic composition, without regard to training or experience. No play is acceptable if it has been produced in any theater or if it has been offered previously for this award. There are no restrictions as to theme, verse-form, or length; one-act plays are eligible. Since 1943 the award alternated with the Stevens Award for prose drama.

Information may be obtained from the Proctor of the Maxwell Anderson Contest, Office 200M, Stanford University, California.

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine Short Story Awards

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine announced in 1945 an annual $5,000 contest for detective and crime short stories. The stories must be between 5,000 and 10,000 words, by either new or established authors. The non-winners which the editor, Ellery Queen, considers acceptable will be published at the usual rates. Christopher Morley and Howard Haycraft are the other two judges. The contest is open to anyone except employees of the magazine and their families. The 1946 competition, conducted in cooperation with Little, Brown, offers prizes totalling $6,000, with a first prize of $3,000. Complete details may be obtained from Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine, 570 Lexington Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

Atlantic Awards in Literature

The Atlantic Awards are made from the £12,500 Rockefeller Fund which was instituted to help English writers whose creative activity was interrupted by the war. The original prize of £250 has been increased to £300. According to provisions of the Fund, similar awards will be made every year for three years. The Chairman of the committee of judges is Professor Allardyce Nicoll of Birmingham University.

1946 John Buxton, William Frank Dudley, Robert Kee, Colin Morris, Leslie Allen Paul, George Scott-Moncrieff, Arthur Teece, C. A. M. West, Laurence Whistler, Margaret Elizabeth Willy, P. H. Newby.

James Tait Black Memorial Prizes

These literary prizes, the most valuable in Great Britain, were founded by the late Mrs. Janet Coats Black in memory of her husband, a partner in the publishing house of A. and C. Black, Ltd., London. Mrs. Black set aside the sum of £11,000 to be used for two prizes of whatever income the fund should produce after paying expenses, including a fee of £50 to the judge. The prizes now amount annually to approximately £250 each. The awards are announced in the spring for books of the preceding year. The James Tait Black Memorial prizes are judged by one man, the Professor of English Literature at the University of Edinburgh, or, failing him, the Professor of English at the University of Glasgow. The judge is assisted by a staff of readers. The prizes are given for the best biography of the year and for the best work of fiction.

Rose Mary Crawshay Prize for English Literature

This prize was founded in 1888 in a bequest from the late Rose Mary Crawshay. Originally it was an annual prize of £100 for a work on Byron, Shelly, or Keats by an Englishwoman. In 1915 the rules were changed extending the prize to a woman of an nationality who, in the judgment of the Council of the British Academy, has written or published, within three calendar years preceding the date of the award, an historical or critical work of value on any subject concerning English literature. Preference continues to be given to works on Byron, Shelley, or Keats. The prize now may or may not be awarded annually. Information concerning this award may be obtained from the Secretary of the British Academy, Burlington Gardens, London, W. 1.

Eyre and Spottiswoode Fellowships

Eyre and Spottiswoode, in conjunction with Houghton Mifflin, announced in 1946 an annual fellowship for British writers. This fellowship, of £1,000, is offered to young authors embarking on a literary career or established authors wishing to engage in work requiring serious study. Both fiction and non-fiction will be considered. Manuscripts submitted should be designed for the general reader, the publishers are not interested in books of a purely technical character or limited appeal. The winning books will be published in both Britain and the United States. The competition closes December 31, 1946. Complete information may be obtained from Eyre and Spottiswoode, Ltd., 14-16 Bedford Street, London, W. C. 2.

Sir Israel Gollancz Memorial Prize

This prize carries a cash award of £100 and is given biennially in memory of Sir Israel Gollancz "for published work of sufficient value on any subject connected with Old English or Early English Language and Literature, or for original investigation connected with the history of English literature or the works of English writers, with preference for the earlier period." Further information may be obtained from the British Academy, Burlington Gardens, London, W. 1.

LITERARY PRIZES

Heinemann Foundation for Literature Award

For many years the Heinemann (Northcliffe) Prize was offered as a reciprocal gesture to the Prix Fémina-Vie Heureuse Anglais. Established in 1921 by Lady Northcliffe, wife of the owner of the London Times, this award of £40 was offered annually for a French work of imagination worthy of representing current French letters abroad. After the death of Lord Northcliffe in 1923, there were various donors of the prize until 1934 when the firm of William Heinemann, Ltd., of London, assumed responsibility for the presentation and changed the name to the Heinemann Prize. This prize was discontinued before World War II. The Heinemann Foundation for Literature Award is a new prize, established in 1944.

The Foundation was established through a bequest in the will of the late William Heinemann, eminent British publisher. The Royal Society of Literature administers the trust which is "to encourage the production of literary works of real worth." The rules for the administration provide that no prize shall exceed the sum of £200 and that the Society is empowered to award or withhold prizes. Publishers will be invited to submit works in proof form as well as recently published books, but individual authors are not eligible to offer their work for the award.

1945 Five Rivers, by Norman Nicholson. (Dutton.)

1946 Prospect of Flowers, by Andrew Young. (Cape.)

In Search of Two Characters, by Dormer Creston. (Scribner.)

The King's Gold Medal for Poetry

The King's Gold Medal for Poetry is offered once in three years, though not always awarded, by His Majesty the King, for a volume of poetry in English, by a British subject, published in the Empire. It is given for a poet's first or second book or to a poet under thirty-five years of age. It was instituted by King George V in 1934 and was continued by King George VI, but was suspended during the war years.

1934 Four Walls, by Laurence Whistler. (Macmillan.)

1937 On This Island, by Wystan Hugh Auden. (Random.)

1940 Milton Blind, by Michael Thwaites. (Blackwell.)

BRITISH EMPIRE PRIZES

The Newdigate Prize

The Newdigate Prize Foundation was established by Sir Roger Newdigate, who had been a member of Parliament for Oxford University from 1750 to 1780. This Foundation has the distinction of being the first one founded for the awarding of a literary prize. The sum of £1,000 was bequeathed by Sir Roger with directions that £21 of the income should be awarded each year to a member of Oxford University for "a copy of English verse of fifty lines and no more, in recommendation of the study of the ancient Greek and Roman remains of architecture, sculpture, and painting." Later, with the consent of the Newdigate heirs, the strict conditions governing the competition were changed.

No woman had ever won the Newdigate Prize until the year 1927, when Miss Gertrude Trevelyan had the distinction of being the first woman recipient. Since then this most famous of undergraduate prizes has been awarded to two other women. Among the recipients of the prize who later attained great distinction in the field of literature are such names as John Ruskin, Matthew Arnold, Dean Stanley, Oscar Wilde, John Buchan, Julian Huxley.

There has been no Newdigate Prize award since the outbreak of war in 1939.

The John Llewelyn Rhys Memorial Prize

The John Llewelyn Rhys Memorial Prize was established in 1941 from a trust left by this young airman, who was posthumously awarded the Hawthornden Prize for his book of short stories, England Is My Village. The prize is awarded annually to a man or woman under thirty, a citizen of the British Empire, for a memorable work, either "in achievement or in promise." Entries must have been published for the first time during the previous calendar year and may be fiction, non-fiction, poetry or drama. The announcement of the award is usually made in June. Further information concerning the award may be obtained by writing to 23 Maida Avenue, London, W. 2.

Sunday Times Literary Prize

In 1946 the London Sunday Times inaugurated an annual prize of £1,000 for a book that makes an "outstanding contribution to English literature." In addition to the monetary award, the author of the winning book will receive a commemorative gold medal. The prize will be given for a work by a British subject published during the twelve months, ending June 30, preceding the award. The initial award will be given for a book published for the first time during the period from July 1, 1946 to June 30, 1947.

AUSTRALIA

S. H. Prior Memorial Prize

The S. H. Prior Memorial Prize was established in 1934 in recognition of the services to Australian literature of Samuel Henry Prior, for many years the editor of The Sydney Bulletin. An annual award is given by his son, H. K. Prior, for the most outstanding contribution of the year to Australian literature. Before the war the award amounted to £500 (Australian), but has now been reduced to £100. Any literary work by an Australian author is eligible and, for the purposes of this award, this includes residents of Australia and New Zealand. The Bulletin reserves the right to publish the winning book in serial form, but all other publishing rights belong to the author. No work that has already won a monetary prize is eligible. Full details of the contest can be obtained from the Trustees, S. H. Prior Memorial Prize, Bulletin Office, 252 George Street, Sydney, Australia.

Governor-General's Literary Awards

The Governor-General's Literary Awards were first given in 1937, for books published during the preceding year. The awards were established by John Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir, then Governor-General of Canada, as a permanent system of recognition for literary merit. All necessary arrangements, including the selection of judges and the making of rules, are entrusted to the Canadian Authors' Association. The awards take the form of bronze medals and are presented to the authors of the best books in four classes—poetry, fiction, academic non-fiction and creative non-fiction—published each calendar year. The authors must be residents of Canada. For more detailed information, inquire of the Canadian Authors' Association, William Arthur Deacon, 66 Parkhurst Blvd., Toronto 12, Canada.

Leacock Medal for Humor

The Leacock Memorial Committee established this annual award in 1946. The Medal will be awarded for the best Canadian book of humor of each calendar year. The first presentation will be made for books published during 1946. The judging will be done under the Governor-General's Awards Board, but the presentation will be separate. The Public Library of Orillia, Ontario is the trustee for the award. Further information may be obtained from William Arthur Deacon, 66 Parkhurst Blvd., Toronto 12, Canada.

Longmans, Green—Coward-McCann Prize Contest

In June 1943, Coward-McCann, Inc. of New York and Longmans, Green and Company of Toronto offered a joint prize of $1,000 for the best book of fiction or non-fiction by a Canadian citizen living in Canada or serving in the Canadian forces outside Canada. The contest, with a prize of $1,000 in addition to royalties, was open to books on any subject, in English, or translated from French into English.

- 1944 Darkly the River Flows, by John Macdonald. (Coward-McCann.)

LITERARY PRIZES

The Ryerson Fiction Award

The Ryerson Press of Toronto offers this award to a Canadian author for a manuscript of merit. The manuscripts are judged by a representative of the Ryerson Press and a representative of the Canadian Authors' Association. The prize of $1,000 is given half as an outright prize and half on account of royalties. The competition was inaugurated to encourage native Canadian writers. The only restriction on subject matter is that spy, detective and crime stories are ineligible. Details may be obtained from the Ryerson Press, 299 Queen Street West, Toronto 2B, Canada.

1942 Little Man, by Herbert Sallans.

1943 No award.

1944 No award.

1945 Day of Wrath, by Philip Child.

Here Stays Good Yorkshire, by Will R. Bird.

1946 No award.

Royal Society of Canada Medal Awards

The Royal Society of Canada awards five medals, two of which are of particular interest to the literary world, the other three being for scientific achievement. These medals are usually awarded annually, but not necessarily so, if, in the opinion of the committee in charge, no person has made a contribution worthy of such honor. The Lorne Pierce Medal is given for accomplishments in imaginative or critical literature and the Tyrrell Medal for outstanding work in connection with the history of Canada. The other three are the Flavelle Medal, established in 1925, for original research in the biological sciences; the Henry Marshall Tory Medal, established in 1943, for outstanding contributions to some branch of physics, chemistry, mathematics, astronomy, or allied sciences; and the Willet G. Miller Medal, also established in 1943, to North American residents who have completed and published outstanding research in geology, mineralogy, or allied sciences. For complete details, address the Royal Society of Canada, National Research Building, Ottawa, Ontario, Canada.

BRITISH EMPIRE PRIZES

THE LORNE PIERCE MEDAL

This medal is the gift of Dr. Lorne Pierce of Toronto, and is awarded to Fellows of the Royal Society of Canada, or others who are Canadian citizens, for achievement of special significance and conspicuous merit in imaginative or critical literature. ## NEW ZEALAND

Esther Glen Award

At its annual conference early in 1945, the New Zealand Library Association announced the establishment of an award to be made each year to the author of the most distinguished contribution to New Zealand literature for children. The award is named in honor of Esther Glen, New Zealand author and editor of the children's page in the Christchurch Sun. The first award was made during Book Week in November 1945

1945 The Book of Wiremu, by Stella Morice. (Paul's Book Arcade.)

CONTINENTAL PRIZES

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Czechoslovak State Prize

The Czechoslovak State Prizes have been awarded annually since 1920 on October twenty-eighth, Czechoslovak Independence Day, for the most outstanding works of the year in many artistic fields. The State Prizes are given for literary works—poetry, fiction, essays, drama—for stage productions, outstanding acting, operatic works, musical compositions, musical performances, as well as for films, painting and sculpture. The best-known and finest Czechoslovak writers were former recipients of the literature prizes—Karel Capek, Josef Capek, Vladislav Vancura, to mention but a few. During the war the government-in-exile, anxious to further the artistic, musical and literary life of its people abroad and to encourage the friends of its people in other countries who interpret Czechoslovak creative achievements and traditions, continued the award. The prize, formerly in money (5,000 crowns), now takes the form of a small bronze bust of T. G. Masaryk.

In 1945, in place of the awards, Dr. Zdenek Nejedly, Minister of Education and Culture, published a decree paying tribute to the Czechoslovak artists and scientists who were killed fighting their oppressors and to those who died in prison camps. This roster included over a hundred names in the fields of literature, music, theater, creative art and architecture, and science.

French Academy Prizes

The literary prizes awarded annually by the French Academy total one hundred and fifty in number, a list too extensive to be included here. The Novel Prize has always been the one attracting most attention and the winning book has often been translated into English. The Grand Prize for Literature amounts to 10,000 francs, the largest monetary award given by the Academy. The Academy was founded in the seventeenth century and its prizes have been given for many years.

GRAND PRIZE FOR LITERATURE

This annual prize of 10,000 francs is given by the French Academy to a writer of prose or to a poet for either a single work or for many works of high inspiration and distinguished style. The prize may not be divided. If, in any year, the prize is not awarded, the sum is used to increase the endowment of other Academy prizes.

The Goncourt Prize

The Goncourt Prize of 5,000 francs has long been one of the most coveted literary prizes in France. Its annual award in December is eagerly awaited and predictions of winners are as rife as the violently dissenting opinions following the decision. The Goncourt selection of the best novel has been said to exert more influence on the literary taste and tendencies of the time than the 150 prizes of the French Academy.

The Goncourt Academy was founded by Edmond de Goncourt and his brother, Jules, who were the creators of the "impressionist" school of fiction. The Academy was to consist of ten members who were to confer an annual award of 5,000 francs upon "the best work of imagination in prose, and exclusively in prose, published during the year, which best exemplified youth, boldness and talent." After seven years of litigation the Goncourt Academy was finally organized and the first award was made in 1903.

The Goncourt Academy was founded more or less in opposition to the French Academy. The founders wanted it to represent independent literature as opposed to the "official and fashionable" authors of the French Academy. The pomposity of that sacrosanct body, who call themselves the Forty Immortals, was offset by the bohemianism of the half-score of non-conforming writers who held their meetings, not in the Mazarin Palace, but in Drouant's restaurant and who had, instead of public lectures, nothing but a monthly lunch.

The earliest award of the Goncourt Academy was made in keeping with the defiant tradition of the Goncourts. The prize was given to a novel dealing with insanity, a book unwholesome in tone and written in an extravagant style. Afterwards the

LITERARY PRIZES

Goncourt academicians confessed their mistake in making such a freakish selection and in later years they tended to crown books that have been widely acceptable. The Goncourt Prize has always been given to a young beginner, never to an old established author.

Monsieur J. H. Rosny, Sr., former president of the Goncourt Academy, who died in 1940, published his Mémoires de la Vie Littéraire, containing the history of the Goncourt Academy.

Prize winners from 1903 through 1938 may be found in the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners.

- 1939 Les Enfants Gâtés, by Phillipe Hériat.
- 1940 Les Grandes Vacances, by Francis Ambrière. (Awarded in 1946. The prize money for 1940 was held until after the war, to be given to the best book by a former war prisoner or deportee.)
- 1941 Vent de Mars, by Henri Pourrat.
- 1942 Pareils à des Enfants, by Marc Bernard.
- 1943 Passage de l'Homme, by Marius Grout.
- 1944 No award.
- 1945 Le Premier Accroc Coute 200 Francs, by Elsa Triolet.
- 1946 Mon Village à l'Heure Allemande, by Jean-Louis Bory.

Prix Femina-Vie Heureuse

The French Prix Fémina-Vie Heureuse of 5,000 francs was founded in 1904 by a group of French women writers and was awarded for the best work of imagination in the French language, prose or poetry, by a man or woman. It was offered by two French periodicals, Femina and La Vie Heureuse. The list of prize winners from 1904-1938 is given in the 1939 edition of Literary Prizes and Their Winners.

In 1919 the Femina committee voted to extend their prize to foreign countries, establishing in that year the Prix Fémina-Vie Heureuse Anglais, later known as the Stock Prize, and in 1932 the Prix Femina American. Reciprocal prizes were established in England and the United States. The Heinemann (Northcliffe) Prize is described on page 86. The America-France Award was discontinued in 1936, after three awards had been made. For details see the 1939 edition of Famous Literary Prizes and Their Winners.

- 1939 La Rose de la Mer, by Paul Vialar.
- 1940-1944 No awards.
- 1945 Les Editions de Minuit (Refused the award.)
- 1946 Le Chemin du Soleil, by Ann-Marie Monnet.

PORTUGAL

The Camões Prize

This prize is given by the Portuguese government for the best literary or scientific work by a foreign author published in English, French, German, Portuguese, Spanish or Italian on the subject of "Portugal", its history, art, architecture, culture, or any other aspect of the country.

The award has a monetary value of 20,000 escudos (approximately £200 at the 1943 rate of currency exchange). It was founded as a memorial to Luis Camões, 16th century Portuguese poet. The prize is awarded biennially by a jury consisting of six Portuguese writers of recognized merit, together with the director of the Secretariado da Propaganda Nacional. The winning author is invited to visit Lisbon for personal presentation of the award. In 1946 the prize will be awarded for the years 1944 and 1945.

1937 Portugal, by Gonzague de Reynold.

1939 I Gathered No Moss, by John Gibbons. (Hale.)

1941 La Revolución Portuguesa, by Jesús Pabón.

1943 Land of Prester John, by Elaine Sanceau. (Knopf.)

SWEDEN

Swedish Novel Prize

The Ljus Publishing Company, Stockholm, in cooperation with the Thomas Y. Crowell Company, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and George G. Harrap and Company, Ltd., London, offered $25,000 (the largest monetary award, except for the Nobel Prize, ever offered in Scandinavia) for a novel. The contest, which closed May 1, 1946, was open only to authors writing in the Scandinavian languages and provided for book and film rights. The book will be published in Sweden, Norway, France, and the Netherlands.

1946 In the Last Moment, by Thore Ericsson.

Echo of a Voice, by Nanna Lindefjeld. Extra award.

Stalin Prizes

The Stalin Prizes were instituted in 1939 by the order of the Council of the People's Commissars of the U. S. S. R. in honor of the sixtieth birthday of Joseph Stalin, and were first awarded in 1941. Over one hundred and fifty prizes are awarded annually in various fields—science, invention, music, films, medicine, theater, dance, art and literature. In 1942 eighteen first prizes of 100,000 rubles each were given in the field of art and literature.

Not all of the prize-winning books have been translated or published in the United States. Therefore, the list below includes only those which are available in translation, and is as complete as possible within this limitation.

Fall of Paris, by Ilya Ehrenburg. (Knopf.)

Taras' Family, by Boris Gorbатов. (Cattell.)

Two Captains, by Benjamin Kaverin. (Modern Age.)

The Front, by Alexander Korneichuk. (Macmillan.)

Chariot of Wrath and Road to the Ocean, by Leonid Leonov. (Fischer.)

(Prize won for untranslated work.)

Twelve Months, by Samuel Marshak. (Yale.)

Pugachev, by Anatole Shishkov. (Crowell.)

Quiet Flows the Don, by Mikhail A. Sholokhov. (Knopf.)

Days and Nights, by Konstantin Simonov. (Simon & Schuster.)

The Russian People, by Konstantin Simonov. (Macmillan.)

Soul of the Sea, by Leonid Sobolev. (Lippincott.)

Road to Calvary, by Alexei Tolstoy. (Knopf.)

The Rainbow, by Wanda Wasielewska. (Simon & Schuster.)

Further Information on Foreign Awards

Information concerning literary prizes and their winners in foreign countries may be obtained from Books Abroad, a publication of the University of Oklahoma Press, Norman, Oklahoma. This magazine, which reviews books published in all countries outside the United States, is published quarterly and for the past dozen years has carried annually in its Winter Number a section called "Literary Landmarks" which includes news of international prizes.

LATIN AMERICAN PRIZES

LATIN AMERICAN PRIZES

There are many literary prizes given in all of Latin America, sponsored by countries, cities, book trade associations, libraries, periodicals and publishing houses. During the past few years it has been impossible to compile accurate and complete information about these awards. The Winter Number of Books Abroad, published by the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Oklahoma, carries rather extensive information on the miscellaneous prizes given in Latin America.

Latin American Prize Novel Contest

Farrar and Rinehart, the Division of Intellectual Cooperation of the Pan American Union and Redbook Magazine announced in 1940 a prize contest for the best book, preferably a novel, by a Latin American author. The competition, which offered a prize of $2,500, was judged by an international jury consisting of Ernesto Montenegro, Blair Niles, and John Dos Passos.

In 1943 the prizes consisted of $2,000 for the best novel, $2,000 for the best work of non-fiction, and $1,000 for the best children's book.

- 1941 El Mundo es Ancho y Ajeno (Broad and Alien is the World), by Ciro Alegria of Chile.
